How to sync?

Jupiterimages/Comstock/Getty Images Apple's iPhone can't be synced to a PC in the customary way -- that is, using the iTunes interface -- via Bluetooth. However, you can pair with Bluetooth for some syncing functionality, including syncing your contacts, email, notes and calendar. You can also use to Bluetooth connection to control and play music located on the iPhone via your computer without a cable connection. Tap the "Settings" icon on the iPhone's home screen. Click the "Bluetooth" option in the Settings menu. Slide the Bluetooth button from left to right to switch from "OFF" to "ON" if it is not already set to "ON." Your iPhone is now discoverable and will begin searching for other Bluetooth-enabled devices. Click "Start | Control Panel | Add a Device | Hardware and Sound" to launch the Add a Device configuration window and your iPhone appear within several seconds. Select the iPhone icon and click "Next." Windows 7 generates a six-digit PIN to verify the connection between your iPhone and PC. Select "Yes" and click "Next." Tap the "Pair" button from the pop-up menu generated from your iPhone. Your iPhone pairs with your Windows 7 computer. Click "Synchronization Settings" from the "Bluetooth Phone Operations and Settings" window. If this window does not pop up automatically, go back to Control Panel, click "Devices and Printers" and double-click the iPhone icon. Select the items you wish to synchronize and click "Apply." There are a few things to consider before you can connect your smartphone to your car. First, make sure your handset has Bluetooth capability. Then, ensure that the systems you're considering are compatible with your particular phone. They're generally sold in two main ways: as a factory-installed option or an aftermarket add-on. Aftermarket add-ons are relatively inexpensive and compatible with almost any car, but they typically lack the functionality of a factory-installed system. One way to install Bluetooth connectivity into your car is by purchasing a new stereo or a unit that can be hardwired into your current stereo. These systems, which play calls through your car's speakers, are manufactured by companies like Alpine, Parrot and Motorola. They automatically upload your contacts to support audible caller ID and voice-activated calling. They can also play music wirelessly from your phone, which, like the music from your car stereo, is automatically muted when you have an incoming call. A cheaper alternative is to buy a unit that doesn't require any special wiring. These units offer similar features to their hardwired counterparts, but the sound is played through a visor or windshield-mounted speaker. They lack the ability to mute your car stereo when you receive a phone call. Factory-installed systems are becoming more common, and not just in luxury vehicles. A popular example is Ford's SYNC, launched in fall 2007 in collaboration with software designer Microsoft. Like the after-market units, SYNC offers music playback and voice-activated calling. In addition, users get audible text message readback and voice navigation, as well the ability to provide vehicle diagnostics and call 911 when the airbags deploy. Newer models can also link with apps like Pandora, which streams music wirelessly. Such systems are now available through nearly every major car company, including Toyota, Honda, Hyundai, Kia, BMW, Audi, Volvo, Volkswagen, Nissan, Chrysler and GM. The first time you use your phone in the car, you must pair the devices to ensure that they recognize each other in the future. This involves a brief initial setup, but when you're done, your phone will automatically connect each time you get in the car. After a few hands-free commands, you'll never want to handle your phone while driving again. Look, Ma, No hands! Syncing your smartphone with your car is a great way to make phone calls, particularly in states that ban the use of handsets while driving. As of September 2011, nine states had passed such laws, including California, Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Oregon and Washington. Washington, D.C., and the Virgin Islands also prohibit drivers from using handheld cell phones. Khamosh Pathak / How-To Geek Without your contacts, your iPhone isn't a complete phone. You can import your contacts from Google or iCloud, but there will be times when you'll need to manually add a new contact to your iPhone. Here's how it works. How to Add Contact Using the Phone App You can add a new contact using the "Phone" app and the "Contacts" app. The process is the same. In this example, we'll use the Phone app (as you might already be familiar with it). Open the "Phone" app on your iPhone, and go to the "Contacts" tab. Here, tap the "+" icon in the top-right corner. From the top, you can add the new contact's first name, last name, and company details. Scroll down and first tap on the "Add Phone" button. This will show a new phone number field. Enter their phone number here. You can now scroll down and add their email address, address, birthday, and notes in a similar fashion. If you want to assign a special ringtone, go to the "Ringtone" section. From here, you can also enable Emergency Bypass to let their calls through even when you have Do Not Disturb enabled. RELATED: How to Let a Contact Bypass iOS' Do Not Disturb Mode Lastly, scroll back to the top. If you want to add a contact photo, tap the "Add Photo" link. From the next screen, you'll see multiple profile photo options. You can use a photo from your camera roll, or you can use a Memoji or an Animoji. Tap the "Photos" button to choose a photo from your Camera Roll. You can browse through all of your photos here. Tap on an image to select it. Now, you can move and scale the photo to fit in the circle. Then tap the "Choose" button. Lastly, you can add a filter to the profile picture. Tap the "Done" button to save the profile photo. You'll be taken back in the profile picture screen. Again, tap the "Done" button in the top-right corner. Now, go through the new contact creation page to make sure everything looks good. Tap the "Done" button to save the contact. You'll now see the contact in the Contacts app on your iPhone. How to Add a Contact from The Call Log Quite often, you want to save the phone number of someone who has just called you. In this case, you won't need to enter the phone number yourself. Open the "Phone" app on your iPhone, and go to the "Recents" tab. Here, find the number that you want to save and then tap the "i" button found on the right edge of the screen. Now, tap the "Create New Contact" button. You'll see the familiar "New Contact" screen (from the above section). The difference here is that the phone number is already added. You can now fill in the rest of the details, including a profile photo. Once you're finished, tap the "Done" button to save the contact. How to Find and Call a Contact If you are new to the iPhone, you might be wondering how exactly to find a saved contact. Well, there's the traditional way, and then a couple of quick shortcuts. Open the "Phone" app on your iPhone, and go to the "Contacts" tab. Here, tap the "Search" bar at the top of the screen and search for the contact. Select the contact from the search results to see their detailed information. Now, tap the "Call" button to place a call. Alternatively, you can also use Spotlight Search to quickly find and call a contact. On your iPhone home screen, swipe down on the display to bring up the search bar. Here, simply type the contact name. You'll see their contact page at the top of the list. Tap the "Call" button next to their name to place a call. The fastest way, though, is using Siri. On iPhones with Face ID, press and hold the "Side" button on your smartphone and say "Call (contact name)." On older iPhones with a Touch ID, press and hold the fingerprint sensor to bring up Siri. If you're placing the call for the first time, Siri will ask you which number you want to use. After, Siri will directly place the call for you. Have your contacts saved in Gmail? You can sync and manage contacts from the "Settings" app on your iPhone. RELATED: How to Manage and Delete Contacts On Your iPhone or iPad As more and more business is conducted on our phones, it becomes essential for us to be able to access the proper contacts and information needed to get our work done. However, if the mobile ecosystem you subscribe to doesn't match up with your company's email provider, things can get confusing. For iPhone users who work for an organization that relies on G Suite, it's actually pretty simple to port your Google account contacts to your smartphone. The process used to require third party apps to work smoothly, but there is now a built-in mechanism that makes it easy. SEE: BYOD (Bring Your Own Device) Policy Template (Tech Pro Research) Here's how you can sync your Google contacts with your iPhone. For starters, you'll obviously need to have a Google account. Before you attempt to sync the account, make sure you have your account name and password handy--you'll need them to complete the process. Begin by tapping on the Settings app (the one that looks like a silver cog and gear) on your iPhone. Once in the Settings app, scroll down a bit and tap on the "Contacts" option. On the Contacts page, tap the "Accounts" option at the very top of the page. On this page you will see all the email accounts you currently have set up on your phone. To add a new Google account, tap "Add Account" and, on the following page, tap "Google." At this point, you should be prompted to enter your username (usually your Gmail email address) and password. If you have enabled two-factor authentication, you will also need to follow prompts for that as well at this point. When you are done, tap "Next." When you are shown the account information, you will see which features are to be integrated. Make sure that "Contacts" has been tapped, and that the button has been selected with green behind it (see below). Once you have finished this step, tap "Save" if you are prompted to do so, and then exit the app. When you next open your iPhone's "Contacts" app, the sync should begin. If the sync does not occur as expected, Google recommends going back into your Settings to the Contacts page and making sure that "Contacts" is actually turned on. If it is, tap on the account name from the Contacts page, and then the option that says "Advanced." From there, switch on the "Use SSL" option, and then back out and hit "Done" on the account page. If all else fails, try removing and readding the account.
